Dear Prof. Dayaratne,

I hope this message finds you well.

Please find attached our manuscript entitled "Reviving Vernacular Architecture in India: A Study of Indigenous Building Traditions" for consideration in the ISVS e-journal and Cover letter.

We confirm that this manuscript is original, has not been published elsewhere, and is not currently under consideration by any other publication.

Thank you very much for considering our work. We look forward to your feedback and hope to contribute meaningfully to the journal.

Dear Deepak,

Finally, the reviews of your paper have arrived and we have composed the two reviews into one to enable you to understand the issues clearly and to figure out how to revise the paper. It thus comprises instructions.

Please revise the paper accordingly and save as 'ISVSej_12.05.XX_Deepak Revised.' Send me the final revised version within about a month. The paper is lined up to be published in the 12.05 issue due in September 2025. Please make sure that the file size is less than 1MB: reduce the images to web size if needed.

Mention the ORCID number at the end of your address if you have one. Please add acknowledgements, a statement about conflict of interest and a statement about the 'availability of data' at the end of the paper just before the conclusions.

Please confirm that you intend to submit the revision to reserve a slot for you in the 12.05 issue.

Looking forward to hearing from you,

Deepak Kumar <deepakk.ph22.ar@nitp.ac.in>

Dear Prof. Ranjith,

Thank you for sharing the consolidated review comments and detailed instructions for revision. I confirm my intention to submit the revised version of the paper for the 12.05 issue scheduled for September 2025.

I will revise the manuscript as per the given guidelines, including image optimization (file size < 1 MB), addition of ORCID, acknowledgements, conflict of interest, and data availability statements. I will ensure to submit the final revised version within the stipulated timeline.

Please let me know if there are any additional requirements or formatting specifications I should follow.

Thank you for your guidance and support.
